

RUFF POUF | Seating on circles

Designed by Romero Vallejo for GAN, GANDIABLASCO's indoor brand, the RUFF POUF is a very charming furniture accessory which is inspired by the fabric ruffles worn around the neck during the Elizabethan era to denote wealth and status.

Mixing geometry and folding techniques RUFF POUF consists of a solid circular drum made from expanded polystyrene and foam rubber surrounded by a continuous pleated skirt made from 100% felted new wool. The combination of hard and soft, abstract and geometrical patterns lends this furniture item its strong character which makes a bold design statement.

There are two different sizes, a high and a lower pouf, 40cm and 30cm respectively. The higher version has a diameter of 70cm while the lower version has a larger diameter measuring 100cm.

The colour options combine selected tones for the inner pleats with the overall grey felt of the outer pleats and body of the poufs; grey, beige and purple for the high version, grey and yellow for the lower pouf.

About de Romero Vallejo

Sara Romero Bustamante and Mariano Vallejo López-Aguado studied architecture at the Escuela Técnica Superior de Arquitectura of Barcelona and Valladolid. In 2004, after some years working experience with prestigious architectural offices they founded "Romero Vallejo", a multidisciplinary architectural and design office, where projects of both large and small scale are developed. In parallel, they have collaborated with crafts based and industrial manufacturers to create new products, adapting traditional techniques and assembly to the new construction requirements and contemporary design.
